

Every day you see things worth remembering.
 Here's an easy way to make yourself a mini-book to carry in your pocket—so that you can write stories about and draw pictures of all the amazing things you do and see.

HERE'S ALL YOU NEED:

- paper
- scissors
- a pencil
- your brain

Just follow these simple steps:

Start with your paper like this

Fold your paper in half

Unfold it

Turn it so it looks like this

Fold it in half the other way

Fold it in half one more time

Unfold it just once

Cut along the middle fold until you reach the other middle fold

Fold the front down

Flip it over and fold the other side down

Turn it over and lay it down so it looks like this:

Fold it in half away from the cut . . .

. . . so that it looks like this:

NOW FOLD IT CLOSED TO MAKE YOUR BOOK!

MY QUASI-SCIENTIFIC SURVEY OF THINGS I'VE SEEN a scavenger hunt book by draw yourself here

- a triangle
- something shiny
- a piece of bark
- something that squeaks
- a flower
- someone with curly hair
- a kid I asked a question to
- THIS: (draw your picture below)

- a blue coat
- a car with a stripe on it
- a woman with something in her hair
- an antenna
- a bug
- a place where water has collected
- something with wheels that isn't a car
- THIS: (draw your picture below)

OUT IN THE WORLD

AT THE PLAYGROUND

IN MY ROOM

- underpants
- a smiley face
- a book with a green cover
- something with buttons
- a picture of an animal
- something that feels cold
- a dark place
- THIS: (draw your picture below)

AT HOME

- a light bulb
- the number 7
- something purple
- something made out of wood
- a place I can see my reflection
- a hiding place
- something fuzzy
- THIS: (draw your picture below)

IN THE BATHROOM

- something white
- something wet
- the letter H
- a toy
- fingernail clippers
- something that wouldn't look weird in
- a room that wasn't the bathroom
- THIS: (draw your picture below)

AT THE LIBRARY

- a man with a mustache or beard
- a librarian who helped me with something
- a mouse
- a window I can see a car from
- a cozy place to read
- a recommended book
- THIS: (draw your picture below)